ABSTRACT

A method, performed by a processing device, for use in an electronic learning system that stores information as learning objects, includes designating a target learning object as a project object, and storing dependency data in the project object. The dependency data identifies at least a version of a first object that depends directly from the project object, and a version of a second object that depends indirectly from the project object.

5

10   20828426.doc